INTRODUCTION

A section break slide like this will not count as a slide. It is there for good organization of the presentation.

INTRODUCTION

Introduction can span across multiple slides. Keep in mind, your presentation should be limited to a maximum of 17 slides to accommodate the 10-minute time limit.

Include the objective/motivation of the research, some background material for the audience to follow your work, and a brief outline of what you did here.

BACKGROUND

TOPIC 1

No need to adhere to the graphics shown in here. You can use a list to outline the topics.

TOPIC 2

Your audience would consist of the chairs – experts in the field, and participants.

TOPIC 3

Keep the background to a maximum of 2 slides. You can explain things further when you present.

TOPIC 4

You can add/remove subtopics to your liking. You can also add a literature review here.

RESEARCH OBJECTIVES

Try to keep the objectives to a single slide. You can list the main objectives and explain them in the oral presentation.

LITERATURE REVIEW

You can include the main idea in the literature that is relevant to your research here.

A. Author, (1986)

2.

Cite the things in your references slide, if possible.
